Ever since we won the 1983 World Cup in cricket, it became the most popular game for all. A makeshift cricket pitch was created in an open space in almost every village and the children played the game with whichever bat and ball they could get hold of. That was the joy they experienced. Winning or losing the game was not a big deal. How well one played the game or how well one was cheered for playing well, was all that mattered. Nowadays, every sport is getting commercialized. That's the beginning of strifes, jealousies, heart burns, deep disappointments and lasting anguish. We are sacrificing joy for fame and are fast losing out on our national games.

The old woman was quick to realize the awful danger the night train from Baltimore or Ohio was due to cross the bridge in about half an hour. What could she do? There was no signal box, no telegraph station to which she could run in order to warn the fast approaching train of the danger ahead. In that howling wind, a shout would only be heard as a whisper.

There was but one way of stopping the train, and that was to show a bright danger light. Clinging to each other for support, the two women stumbled back to the little shack in order to find some means of giving a warning signal.
